In the Gazette Mercantile, published at Buenos Ayres, of the date of the 27th January, we find the following biographical sketch of the Liberator Bolivar.

"Noble and rich by birth, nature endowed him with a genius capable of comprehending every thing. Lively, energetic and enterprising; his body partakes of his moral activity. Brought up as a gentleman, his education was brilliant. A Catholic in principle, he respects all sects and modes of worship. Reason made him love philosophy, philosophy justice. The revolution of his country, laid out for him fields of battle; his valor obtained for him the command of the army. Victory acquired for him that of the state.

"Then it was that the strength of his genius displayed itself, consoling the new world and dazzling the old with the brilliancy of his splendid talents. Absolute chief of the state, he disposed of its treasury, and was always poor. Idolized by the army, he partook with the soldier his troubles and fatigues. Beloved by the people, he obeyed the law like a citizen. His disinterestedness and virtue appeared in him instinctive. His ruling passion was ambition, his ambition glory; his glory to do good and appear singular without a rival. That glory is the mistress which he courted, the Deity which he idolizes, a desire which fortune cannot satisfy, nor disgrace extinguish. He disdained the crown his dangers merited, because accepting it would make him resemble Napoleon, and he was not satisfied with having freed his country because Washington had done as much. The infancy of his career, was favored by fortune and was not corrupted; disasters followed and he rose superior to them. His soul is always the same, noble and energetic. In his country whether a fugitive, conqueror or conquered, in Bayaca or in Puerto, in Caraccas or Hayti, constancy was his faith, liberty his hope. To realize this hope, the enchanting dream of his youth, he did not tolerate half way measures whatever they might be. The feelings of the man gave way to those of the patriot, and he sacrificed his philanthropy on the altar of necessity, accepting war even unto death. But scarcely had triumph sealed the independence of his country, combining the tear of sensibility with the laurel of victory, the illustrious conqueror, by a noble revenge dictated the terms of war. His country freed by his sword, and established by his virtue, the chief, the hero, the Liberator, as his only recompense, asked the title of Good Citizen."

THE DUEL.

From the National Intelligencer, April 11.

The following statement of a transaction which, on Saturday last and since, has excited considerable sensation in this city, has been authorized by the friends of the parties; and may of course be implicitly relied upon. We have only to add to it, that the difference, thus adjusted, is supposed to have arisen out of considerations merely political:

"On Saturday, the 8th of April, at half past four o'clock, a meeting took place between Mr. Clay and Mr. Randolph, upon a call of the former, in consequence of certain expressions used by the latter in a recent debate in the Senate, which Mr. Clay considered offensive, and applied personally to him.

Mr. Randolph was attended by Col. Tattnall, of Georgia, and Major Hamilton, of South Carolina. Mr. Clay by Gen. Jessup, of the Army, and Mr. Johnston, of Louisiana.

The parties met on the ground—exchanged salutations, and took their stations.

The pistol of Mr. Randolph which was suspended by his side, went off. It was perceived to be an accident, and so pronounced by Mr. Clay; immediately, however, upon the report of the pistol, Mr. Randolph turned to Col. Tattnall and said, "I told you so." Col. Tattnall, then turning to Gen. Jessup, observed, "Sir, the fault is mine; Mr. Randolph protested against the use of the hair trigger; it was at my express instance the hair was sprung." Another pistol was immediately handed to Mr. Randolph—the parties resumed their stations, and exchanged shots without effect.

Immediately after the report of the pistols, while Col. Tattnall and Gen. Jessup were re-loading, Col. Benton, of Missouri, rode up, and united with Mr. Johnston and Maj. Hamilton in an effort to stop the affair, which proved ineffectual. The parties again took their stations, and the word being given, Mr. Clay raised his pistol and fired, and the ball passed through Mr. Randolph's clothes. Mr. Randolph reserved his fire—holding his pistol perpendicularly up—said, "I do not fire at you, Mr. Clay;" and discharged his pistol in the air. He added, "It was not my intention to have fired at you at all; the unfortunate circumstance of my pistol going off accidentally, changed my determination." At this instant Col. Benton came up, and said, "Yes, Mr. Randolph told me so expressly, eight days ago." The parties simultaneously approached towards each other, both with extended hands—Mr. Randolph remarking, "Sir, I give you my hand"—which was cordially received by Mr. Clay; and the affair thus honorably and happily closed.

The friends of the parties, without consulting their respective principals, in the hope of terminating the difference in a manner alike honourable to both, were induced to delay the period of meeting for a few days."

SURRENDER OF CALLAO.

NEW YORK, April 9.

We have received by the Emily, Cook, Jamaica papers to the 12th ult. The English ship of war, Scylla, arrived at Kingston, March 8th, in 4 days from Carthage, and brought letters stating that the fortress of Callao surrendered by capitulation on the 23d of January, to the republican General Salan.

The garrison at the time of its surrender was reduced to about five hundred men, and General Rodil was making arrangements to depart for Europe. As the war in Peru is now at an end, the whole Colombian army which was at the siege of Callao, amounting to nearly six thousand men, will be immediately transported to Carthage, at which place vessels have been chartered to proceed to Chagres for this purpose.

The fleet sitting out at Carthage, was preparing for sea but slowly, in consequence of the scarcity of seamen. The new frigate South America, built by Mr. Eckford, of New York, was the admiration of every one, and elicited the warmest praise from all the nautical men, who considered her as the greatest acquisition to the Colombian Navy.

Union, March 14.

An incident occurred in this village on Saturday last, which deserves to be noticed, as evincing a remarkable degree of presence of mind, exerted in saving the life of a fellow being. It seems that a boy had been paddling about on a raft in the water, when, in consequence of the freshet, has for a few days overflowed the banks of the river. Venturing a little too far, however, he got into the stream, and was swept rapidly down the current towards the bridge. His danger was perceived by Mr. Hamilton, a man whose coolness and courage in such emergencies has been frequently displayed; at a single glance he took the direction in which the boy would make his appearance after he passed under the bridge—ran to the opposite side—burst off the clapboards with his foot—stretched himself over, and finding he would be unable to reach sufficiently low to rescue the lad in danger, seized another boy, and suspending him over the water at his arms' length, held him in that position until the one in the water had emerged from under the bridge and been caught in the arms of the one suspended, when Hamilton drew them both out together. When it is considered this calculation was the work of a single moment, and that too, one of considerable excitement, it strikes us as a singular instance of presence of mind, which merits mention and praise.

The number of tracts issued from the Depository of the London Religious Tract Society, during the past year, was upwards of 10,500,000. This amount does not include the tracts which have been printed at the expense of the Society in foreign countries. The number of publications distributed in all languages, since the establishment of this Society, is estimated to exceed 100,000,000. Since the year 1808, tracts have been printed by this useful institution, in forty-two different languages.

The receipts of Missionary, Bible, Education and Tract Societies, during the past year, in England and America, amounted to more than $1,600,000.

GEORGETOWN, (Ky.) March 24.

We learn from a gentleman who left Frankfort early yesterday morning, that the case of Beauchamp (the supposed murderer of Col. Sharp) was before the Grand Jury of Franklin county, who it was supposed, would find a true bill against him some time during the day, and he would be put upon trial.

The trial of Isaac B. Dasha, in the Harrison Circuit Court, was, on motion of the Attorney for the Commonwealth, postponed until the next June term. The absence of witnesses, whose testimony was thought to be essential for the Commonwealth, was the ground of the postponement.

From the Freeman's Journal, March 28.

Yesterday, the court of quarter sessions sentenced John Pfeiffer to six months imprisonment and fined him one hundred dollars. The circumstances attending this case were of a singular description, and excited no little interest. The defendant kept a spot of ground, in which he interred dead bodies for pay. Some time since he had interred the body of a child, two years and a half old, which he afterwards disinterred and sold to a physician. For this offence the indictment was framed to which he plead guilty. The whole transaction was one calculated to excite odium, and we are glad justice has had its due.

Few States of the Union are better adapted to the purposes of grazing than Connecticut, and we are glad to see that the opulent farmers in the vicinity of Hartford are determined to turn to the best account, the gifts of nature and the results of their own industry. An enterprising individual of East Windsor, in that state, has recently purchased from John H. Powell, Esq. of this city, the imported short-horned Durham Bull, Blue Comet, for $300.

U. S. Gaz.

Literary.—It is said that the long looked for work, The Voyage of Christopher Columbus, compiled chiefly from his own papers, which have been discovered within a year, and which composed a part of the extracts from his journal, is now in the press at Madrid, prepared by the Bishop Las Casas.

It is stated in letters from Washington, that Mr. McDuffie's quarrel with the western members will end in words; we had received such assurances of duels in the papers, that we thought of nothing less than vacancies, new elections, &c., and we had really anticipated a favourable change in the silk market, by hearing of orders for rib-silk dresses, which are said to be so convenient in glancing balls, propelled by small charges of powder.

Mr. Jefferson.—On the 17th ult. a bill was introduced into the Legislature of Louisiana, entitled an act giving to Thomas J. Jefferson, late president of the United States, a striking proof of the consideration & gratitude inspired by the important services rendered by him to his country. This bill proposes to give a pension of $10,000 per annum to his heirs forever in a direct and undisturbed manner.

"OTILE—DULCE."
A MOTHER'S GRIEF.
A SERVO FROM LIFE,
To mark the sufferings of the babe
That cannot speak its woe;
To see the infant tears gush forth,
Yet know not why they flow;
To meet the meek uplifted eye,
That fain would ask relief,
Yet can but tell of agony—
This is a mother's grief.

Thro' dreary days and darker nights,
To trace the match of death;
To hear the faint and frequent sigh,
The quick and shortened breath;
To watch the last dread strife draw near,
And pray that struggle brief,
Though all is ended with its close—
This is a mother's grief!

To see in one short hour, decayed
The hope of future years;
To feel how vain a father's prayers,
How vain a mother's tears;
To think the cold grave now must close
O'er what was, once, the chief
Of all the treasured joys of earth—
This is a mother's grief!

Yet, when the first wild throbs are past
Of anguish and despair,
To lift the eye of faith to heaven,
And think, "my child is there!"
This best can dry the gushing tears,
This yields the heart relief;
Until the Christian's pious hope,
Outcomes a mother's grief.

Baron Steuben.
The Baron was as rough as the ocean in a storm, when great faults were committed; but if, in a sudden gust of passion, he had injured the redress was ample. I recollect that at a review near Morristown, a Lieut. Gibbons, a brave and good officer, was arrested on the spot, and ordered into the rear, for a fault which another had committed. At a proper moment, the commander of the regiment came forward and informed the Baron of Mr. Gibbons' innocence, of his worth and of his acute feelings under his unmerited disgrace. "Desire Lieut. Gibbons to come to the front, Colonel," Sir, said the Baron to the young officer, the fault which was made by throwing the line into confusion, might in the presence of an enemy, have been fatal. I arrested you as its supposed author, but I have reasons to believe I was mistaken, and that in this instance you was blameless; I ask your pardon; return to your command; I would not deal unjustly with any, much less with one whose character as an officer is so respectable. All this passed with the Baron's baton, the rain pouring on his reverend head.

Though never master of our language, the Baron understood it with sufficient correctness. He would sometimes of purpose miscall names, and blend or adopt words similar in sound but dissimilar in meaning. Dining at head quarters, which he frequently did, Mrs. Washington asked what amusement he had recourse to now that the certainty of peace had relaxed his labors? I read, my lady, and write, and play chess, and yesterday for the first time, I went fishing. I sat in the boat three hours, it was exceedingly warm, and I caught only two fish; they told me it was fine sport. What kind of fish did you take Baron? I am not sure, but I think one of them was a whale. A whale, Baron, in the North River! Yes, I assure you a fine one my lady. It was a whale, was it not? appealing to one of his aids. An eel, Baron. I beg your pardon lady, but the gentleman certainly told it was a whale.

The eccentric Mr. R., Minister of Jeddburgh, had a habit of asking so many questions in a breath, that he could get a reply to none of them. Once, however, he had met with a person who was able to accommodate him. Riding home from a sacrament, by a meirland road, and coming towards a ford, he met a woman who had crossed the river with a sack of meat upon her back, whom he thus accosted—"Week, Janey, how's a' wi' you? How far is it to Jeddart? How deep is the water? What's the price of your meal?" To which she replied, "Veta well, I thank you, Sir—twas mile—middle deep—and a sixpence."

CURIOSITIES OF THE LAW.
The doctrine of dower was extended very far by a jury in Wales, where the father and son were both hanged in one cart, but the son was supposed to have survived the father, by appearing to struggle longer; where he became seized of an estate in fee by survivorship, in consequence of which decision, his widow had a verdict for her dower.

Blackstone.
A curious question was agitated some time ago respecting the right to the Administration. General Stanwix and an only daughter were lost together at sea, and it was contended, that it was a rule of the civil Law, that when a parent and child perish together, and the priority of their deaths is unknown, it shall be presumed that the child survived the parent. And by this rule the right to the personal estate of the general would have rested in the daughter, and by her death in her next kin, who on the part of the mother was a different person from the next of kin to her father.

Some curious cases by common-law, may be seen in Causes Celebres, 3 tom. 412 at seq. In one of which, where a father and a son were slain together in a battle, and on the same day the daughter became a professed nun, it was determined that her civil death was prior to the death of her father and brother, and that the brother having arrived at the age of puberty, should be presumed to have survived his father.

A Virginian once said of a member of Congress from that state, that he had "a mind as pure as ether, and as vast as infinitude."
But it is left for the poet "Cotrey," to bear away the palm completely from these rhyme quacks of the Parnasian grove. In a beautiful eulogium to Gen. Washington, he said:
"He their armies took, their general's captive led—
Having surrounded their camp with roaring cannon, he made them abominably afraid."
